A New Back for an Old One. How It Can be Done in Norway.

The back aches at times with a dull, indescribable feeling, making you weary and restless; piercing pains shoot across the region of the kidneys, and again the loins are so lame to stoop is agony. No use to rub or apply a plaster to the back in this condition. You cannot reach the cause. Exchange the bad back for a new and stronger one. Norway residents would do well to profit by the following example.

Irving Merrill, Pleasant St., South Paris, Me., says: "A few months ago I began to suffer from pains in the small of my back. After being in a stooped position for any length of time I found it very difficult to straighten. The pain and lameness clung to me for some time and when I saw that the kidney secretions were unnatural and irregular in passage, I decided that my kidneys were affected. I then procured Doan's Kidney Pills and after taking the contents of three boxes, the pain disappeared, together with the kidney difficulty. I heartily recommend Doan's Kidney Pills to any person suffering from disordered kidneys."

Autumn Days.

In the sunshine, warm and tender,
On a carpet soft and brown,
That lies spread with regal splendor
Where the sunbeams are shining down.
From the whispering pine trees' branches—
From the pine trees tall and slender—
I lay and dream, till the world seems
All sunshine, warm and tender.
Joy is in the air, and the world seems
Where the sun so warmly shines,
And I'd fain remain forever
Joyous couch beneath the pines.
Oh, how lovely, purple, hazy
Days of golden autumn time,
On the winging of the singing birds
En route for warmer clime—
Oh, the crimson of the sumacs
That illumine the purple haze
That lays sleeping on the hillside
These royal autumn days—
On my couch beneath the pines
Would dream all day declines
While the grapes grow sweet and purple
Idly swinging on the vines.
The dry brown ferns' meek fragrance,
Mosses sweet the passing breeze
While the squirrels' happy vagrants,
Each one lilies as he pleases.
They have stored the year's provisions,
And now, the time is flying,
They are living in Elysian
Hills, and the time is dying.
On my couch beneath the pines
Care and pain seem far distant
From my couch beneath the pines.

Dancing Blue Eyes.

Sunshine is sweet with early morning dew,
Many eyes may dance with a glow of Heaven's Blue;
Many hearts entice one, and many may be true,
But my heart is true to only one—
You.
You are one of thousands, or only of a few,
But my tender heart is enraptured by your dancing eyes of blue.
Dancing blue eyes tease me at night in my dreams;
I waken to the twinkling stars or bright moonbeams
To find 'twas but a dream, love, and you so far away.
Your dancing blue eyes tease me by night and all the day.
Ever true and tender, sweetheart of mine,
Years may roll onward, love, leads not time.
Storms they may gather, clouds will roll away,
My love will be ever true to me today.
Great men for money scheming are thought so very rare,
While day and night I'm dreaming of dancing
blue eyes.
Your dancing blue eyes tease away all the love
my heart can give;
And if I dream of their teasing I am sure I'd cease to live.
The poetry that's written there, I've studied Yup, I like to have 'em teasing; keep 'em teasing all the time.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only cure. It is known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work.
The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for Frank Kimball Sells a Remedy for Catarrh on that Liberal Basis.

Breathe Hyomei over the germ-tidden membrane, and it will kill the germs, and cure catarrh.

There is no other way—you must get where the germs are before you can destroy them.

And when catarrh germs have disappeared, other things will happen; there will be no more hawking, not even in the morning; that offensive breath will disappear; there will be no more obnoxious mucous, or coughing, or sneezing, or hoarseness of voice, or difficulty in breathing. All these disagreeable accessories of the demon catarrh will disappear, and as they go the glow of health will return, and what was formerly used in combating the invasions of catarrh, will bring back your vitality and ambition, will make a new, healthy, happy being of you in a few weeks.

Frank Kimball, prop. of the Noyes Drug Store, will sell you a complete Hyomei outfit for $1.00. This includes a fine inhaler, a bottle of Hyomei (pronounced High-c-me), and instructions for use. Highlands of Ontario.

Many people have chosen resorts by the sea for their vacation this summer, others the mountains and many the inland waters of the "Highlands of Ontario" for that much needed rest that one should take at least every twelve months.

In many cases the desired haven was found, but in others, the more fashionable resorts did not give the real quiet which in most cases is needed and return to the office with only half the good accomplished. There is one place, however, which offers unlimited inducements to those whose health is run down, or those who are in need of relaxation from worry and work. This place is known as the Algonquin National Park of Ontario, situated 205 miles north of the city of Toronto and 168 miles west of Ottawa. Here the conditions are ideal. The altitude at the Park station, your objective point is 1,100 feet above the sea level. The "Highland Inn" built for the accommodation of 100 people on a bluff overlooking Cache Lake, is a comfortable hotel set on one of the beauty spots of this charming reserve.

Modern plumbing with bathrooms with hot and cold water; large, bright sleeping rooms, and cozy lounging rooms with large, bright open fireplaces are a few of the special features. The "Inn" is also heated by furnace.

The months of October and November are ideal in this locality and a sojourn there is recommended.

For further particulars, descriptive literature, maps, etc., apply to J. Quinlan, Bonaventure Station, Montreal.

Women as Well as Men are Made Miserable by Kidney and Bladder Trouble.

Kidney trouble preys upon the mind, discourages and lessens ambition; beauty, vigor and cheerfulness soon disappear when the kidneys are out of order or diseased.

Kidney trouble has become so prevalent that it is not uncommon for a child to be born afflicted with weak kidneys. If the child urinates too often, if the urine scalds the flesh, or if, when the child reaches an age when it should be able to control the passage, it is yet afflicted with bed-wetting, depend upon it, the cause of the difficulty is kidney trouble, and the first step should be towards the treatment of these important organs. This unpleasant trouble is due to a diseased condition of the kidneys and bladder and not to a habit as most people suppose.

Women as well as men are made miserable with kidney and bladder trouble, and both need the same great remedy. The mild and the immediate effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It is sold by druggists, in fifty-cent and one-dollar size bottles. You may have a sample bottle by mail free, also a pamphlet telling all about Swamp-Root, including many of the thousands of testimonials letters received from suffering who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy needed. In writing Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure and mention this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

Nancy.

The White Mountains have not been neglected in literature. They have inspired admirable prose, lofty verse. But one scarcely looks earlier than Whittier, their most faithful and famous poet, to find them celebrated in rhyme.

Yet a recent deliver in antiquarian lore declares that more than eighty years ago a mountain tragedy itself dating back yet further to the century 1, mif, had become the theme of a romantic poem by no less a person than the author of "The breaking waves dashed high"—or, as an early traveller of that period phrased it:

"The region of these mountains is already immortalized by the chaste and elegant pen of the celebrated Mrs. Hemans of Europe."

Mrs. Hemans had, the traveler reluctantly admitted, got the story a little twisted; still her "sweet" and "plaintive strains" atoned by their quality for the slight error of giving her heroine Nancy a faithless lover, whereas the real youth had been loyal.

Nancy—the real Nancy—was a pretty young serving-maid in the employ of Captain Page of Portsmouth. The captain decided to establish a pioneer home in Lancaster, New Hampshire, on the verge of the wilderness, and persuaded the girl to accompany her will, for she was betrothed and soon to be married, to go on with him in advance of the family, to cook for the builders who were erecting the house. He promised that she should return with him when he came back for his wife and children.

The house building took longer than was expected, Nancy grew impatient to leave. At last the captain set out for Portsmouth; but he meanly slipped away alone doubtless wishing to detain a good servant long enough to make the family comfortable on their arrival. The disappointment was so keen, and Nancy, despite the oncoming winter, thin clothing, and a hundred and thirty miles to walk, set out on foot for home.

For thirty-two miles out of Lancaster there was neither house nor road; the dim and rugged trail led through the frowning mountain wilderness of the Crawford Notch. But Nancy followed it unswerving, passed through the Notch, and struggled on, soaked by rain, and then hampered by snow, for cruel miles beyond.

Two more and she would have reached a house, but she sat down exhausted on a log to rest and never rose again. Long after a party of hunters, kindling their evening fire, caught a glint of firelight on something odd nearby that looked like a man. They went close, and saw the body of a young girl frozen to a statue of ice.

It is a moving little tragedy of home-sickness, even without the embellishment of the chaste and elegant pen of Mrs. Hemans, whose poem of poor Nancy's fate is as generally forgotten as that of the Pilgrim Fathers is generally remembered.—[Youth's Companion.]

Road Experimenting.

The Rickers are experimenting with new material for the preservation of road surface and for the laying of dust. It is a by-product of the pulp mills at Ausable, N. Y. It is a solid, shipped in barrels, and is mixed with water—one part to four of water. When spread upon the highways, it is claimed to harden into an ideal surface. This substance is called "glutinitin."

It was discovered, like many other similar things, by accident. For many years there was a fight made in New York state against the pollution of the waters of Lake Champlain by the pulp mills along the Ausable River. The result was that the mills had to seek a new place to dispose of their refuse and in so doing discovered several valuable by-products, among others, glutinitin.

The result of the experiments in road making on Ricker Hill will be watched with interest.

Cattle Show and County Fair.

As a Boy Saw It Forty Years Ago.

I wonder if there ever was a boy who grew up in the country and childhood to manhood who did not at some time in this period of his life attend the old-fashioned country county cattle show and fair. One of the most delightful experiences of my boyhood was a day at the fair and cattle show.

I was 12 years old, was born and had always lived upon a farm. At rare intervals I had been "to town" and once or twice had been in a stable and proper sort of way, with my father, to the fair and cattle show; but this year I was to go alone—early in the morning and stay all day!

The day before my father, having business in town, carried me with him to the house of my aunt who lived near the fair grounds; and I remained there over night that I might be on hand to enjoy the very earliest doings of the fair ground.

I had little sleep that night and was up before 5 o'clock. My aunt, good as my mother, and I went to the fair early start, gave me breakfast; so that before 6 o'clock I was on my way to the fair ground, a mile distant. Of course, as you can well imagine, I was there way ahead of everybody. There were no gatekeepers, so the quarter which my father had given me with some few pennies to spend remained in my pocket as there was no one to take it when I went through the gate.

How well I remember the delights that filled me as I wandered about the grounds that morning. There were the side show tents, all closed, still wrapped in sleep. There were the men who were taking care of the stock that had been brought in the night before, feeding and grooming the horses and cattle, caring for the sheep and pigs and poultry. The great building in the center of the grounds, which would be so active later, was closed and locked.

Pretty soon I saw a man go over the gate. I surmised that he was to be the gate-tender and ticket-taker; and, when he saw me and called to me, I suspected that he wanted my quarter. Being very busy with some men who had a lot of fine cows I made it a point not to hear him.

By this time I had begun to feel that I very much needed all of that quarter, and I satisfied my conscience by reasoning that I had gotten up early and that there was no one to take my fare when I came in, so I was entitled to stay. Or, for the times during the day the gate-keeper called to me to come and pay my quarter. I doubt now if he would have taken it had I gone to him; but I felt, then that my quarter was the main thing on my mind.

The day was much too short to see and do all the things that attracted me. There were the new plows. One I remember in particular, the first sulky plow that I had ever seen—a plow with an actual seat and wheels, and the man who did the plowing sat on the seat and "rode." I had never seen anything like that.

I remember the vegetable cutter, one of the most interesting and fascinating things to me. You could put in a whole turnip or pumpkin and turn a crank and it would cut out in a perfectly round shape. I had never seen anything like that.

And the patent churns! There were half a dozen, and they all turned out some cream. My experience, (and I assure you I was not without extended experience at that time), had been with the dash churn. Were you never a boy who lived in the country and had to churn in the morning before going to school with the old-fashioned dash churn? If you were not I am sorry for you. You have missed some of the best things in life.

Of course there was the double-headed calf—my first great disappointment. I took ten cents of that quarter to see the calf. I think that was the first time that I was ever knowingly deceived. My eyes were big with wonder as I went in. The man had told me that the actual calf was there. I presume he had left out the word "real." I had seen a calf to me many years, in fact, but I had never had enough to tell me that the calf was alive. When I got in there was the little speck up in the corner—you all have seen it; you all have been fooled. There was the likeness to a calf. He did have two heads, but I decided to part with another nickel of my money to see the man who they said was making that music, although both arms had been shot off at the wrist. The music finally drew me in, and this time I was not deceived, never was I cheated. We sat and talked with the man who was making all that sweet music and who was bright and cheerful and happy, though both hands had been literally shot off in the Civil war that was at that time forty years nearer to the present.

And on this occasion I listened for the first time to that rapid rattle of the genuine fakir. I remember every word of his call today, after forty years, more plainly than I remember anything that was in this morning's paper.

"Walk up, each and all, great and small; the high, the low; the big, the little; the thick and thin; tough and tender, slick and slender—All for the sum of a dime. A dime will neither rock, break nor hurt any man's business; although it has made many a man rich and driven many a man to ruin."

I stood entranced listening to that man's language. I thought it the most brilliant thing I had ever heard; and, before I had time to think of the ten cents of my quarter to see what was inside, I had learned his speech, and have given it to you word for word as I heard it that day. It was one of the best little shows I ever saw. There was a lion, and what I know about lion taming, I learned that day. There was a Rocky Mountain goat. I never saw a better specimen. There was a wild cat from Mexico and a man turning handspindles, and a brick horse, some dogs, and last but not least, the real Dan Ducllo. When speaking of thinking of circus, I think of Dan Ducllo. He stands out far and above any other man I have ever known or heard of.

Well, I still had a few pennies that my father had given me to spend inside the fair ground. I had up to this time spent only the quarter that I should have paid at the gate, had I gone in regularly. There were peanuts to buy, an orange—there were never such another orange, I saved every bit of the peel, and long before the day was over that had been eaten, and there was candy. In those days, candy would buy a lot of peanuts and candy.

But I have not told you about the big pavilion and all of the things that were on exhibition there. The thing I remember most clearly was the knitting machine. I had never seen or heard of my grandmother, my aunts and all of the women that I had ever known spent all of their spare time knitting. Upon this knitting machine one could knit more in five minutes than at all the people I knew could knit in a whole evening! I was intensely interested in it, in fact more interested than the man who had it on exhibition. He kept going away every little while and leaving the machine; and I came around so often and stayed so long that finally he left it in my care. I knitted yards and yards of stockings. I forgot that stockings had feet as well as legs, demonstrating to the interested onlookers the wonders of that invention.

That was the way the quilts and rugs; and thank God, as I write, my feet are on one of those same rugs; and many times at night now I sleep under one of those same quilts. The people who made those quilts and rugs were artists. There were many times the true artistic touch and sense in those hands, just as much as it is in the hands that wield the brush. I rarely see in the high priced rugs of today better blending of colors than was in my mother's rag braided rug.

The pumpkins and squashes, the apples and turnips, preserves and butter and cheese, and what not that you find at a country fair, were all there and every one of them received due attention from me during the afternoon.

I saw the horse track. I have never seen such horses, such beautiful turnouts as those appeared to be then; although, as I now remember, 2.50 was the prize horse of the day.

The day ended all too soon. I was there before seven, and was at seven when I reluctantly left the grounds.—[Independent Reporter.]

Fall Is Here.

A chill in the air this morning. Have you noticed the sunshine—how yellow it is?

As yellow as the maple leaves that fluttered down in the green grass by the window this morning.

As yellow as potted holly, as yellow as a lot of amber—Fall sunshine—the sunshine that means "get your winter clothes ready; you'll need them in a few weeks, when you'll run away into the beech forest to hide till next Spring comes again."

What did you have for breakfast—melons and scrambled eggs? Pshaw! What kind of a breakfast is that in Fall? Hot biscuits and honey are what you really need, or some nice little brown, home-made sausages, all buttoned up in their crisp little jackets, with plenty of sage for a dressing and a plate of brown cakes.

Tenderloins are good, too—pork tenderloins, with plenty of gravy and some creamed potatoes to go with them—aren't you glad you don't belong to a dieting club?

What cold comforts those breakfast foods look on a Fall morning like this, don't they?

Hurrah! It's Fall! Let's go down town and order the meat for the sausage and the grapes for the jelly and the pumpkins for the pies.

What—are those Hubbard squashes over there in the corner of the market? Let's have them cut—put one of those squashes into four comfortable pieces, put them in a pan and roast them in a slow oven—serve them in their shell, with some good butter and lots of pepper and salt—and, dear me, what a feast those summer diners we've been having were, weren't they?

Fall's here—with the open fire and the long evenings in the dancing firelight—the evenings that mean so much to friendship and to family life.

Let's get acquainted with each other all over again, won't we, sitting there in the glow of the friendly flames? And the book we haven't had time to read all Summer, and the letters it was too hot to write, and the children who wouldn't come into the house till bedtime—well, let's do them all over again, for it's heart time, home time, fire time, Fall time. Hurrah for Fall!

In no part of Maine are there older residents in large numbers than around Fryeburg. It seems to be a healthful country and the people who reach the Biblical limit of four-score and ten are numerous. One of these, now in her 90th year, is Mrs. Daniel Emerson, a native of Fryeburg, who is living nearby in the "Cold River region," and who is still able to do the housework for her son, Warren Emerson, who is a widower.

Tickling in the Throat

"Just a little tickling in the throat!" Is that what troubles you? But it hangs on! Can't get rid of it! Home remedies don't take hold. You need something stronger—a regular medicine, a doctor's medicine. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral contains healing, quieting, and soothing properties of the highest order. Ask your doctor about this. No alcohol in this cough medicine. J. C. Ayer Co., Lowell, Mass.

Constipation positively prevents good health. Then why allow it to continue? An active liver is a great preventive of disease. Ayer's Pills are liver pills. What does your doctor say?

"The Village."

Included in a lot of second-hand books, pamphlets, broadsides and other literary property retailed at public vendue in Boston last Thursday was a copy of the volume, entitled "The Village," which was written by Enoch Lincoln when he resided here, and which was published in Portland in 1816. The copy was in good condition, and on its title page contained an autograph presentation inscription from the author, and yet it brought only $1.50, which is $2.25 less than a somewhat dilapidated copy brought at auction in Boston on the 3d of last February.

"The Village" is a volume of 180 pages, consisting of a story which ends on page 90 and of a prose appendix which fills the remaining 90 pages. The appendix is divided into three parts, Part I, consisting of "Sketches of Slavery," Part II, of "Sketches of the Follies and Cruelties Growing out of the Penal Law, with an Introductory Section upon the Follies and Cruelties of Superstition."

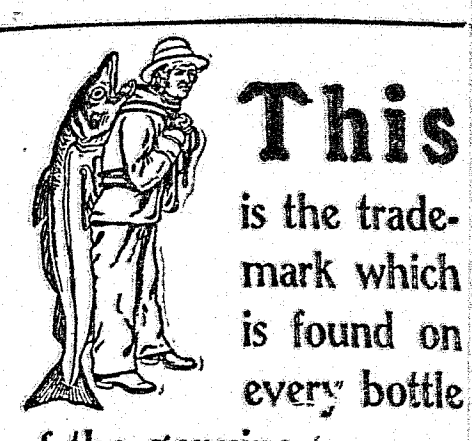

Though the village from which the volume takes its title is, or rather was, Fryeburg Village, the beautiful scenery and the social condition of the village and its vicinity being the subject of which the poetic part of the volume treats, yet very few if any copies of the book are to be found hereabouts.

The volume was published anonymously, and in the dedication of it which was "to the people"—the author says that "The name of the author is concealed because it is too humble to add weight to his claims and his pride is too cautious to hazard the mortification of pointed neglect."

The author was, later in his life, a member of the National House of Representatives, and, still later, was Governor of Maine, he being an incumbent of the latter office at the time of his death, Oct. 8, 1829. (By the way, William B. Lapham's History of Paris, of which town Gov. Lincoln was for several years a resident, erroneously—page 343—gives Oct. 11, 1829, as the date of his death.)

During Mr. Lincoln's term of service as Governor his brother, Levi Lincoln, was, by a curious coincidence, Governor of Massachusetts. Does any reader of the ADVERTISER know of any other instance of brothers who were Governors of States at one and the same time?

Charles Gabre of the Franklin annex at Rumford found Paris green in his flour barrel. Gabre has been living alone on a farm owned by the Lumber Co., care for the company's property, and he has kept a pretty strict watch, preventing many cases of petty thieving.

SAYS ALBERTA LAND IS CHEAP

Another Visitor Comments on Southern Alberta Opportunities

In common with the many visitors who came to Lethbridge, Dr. Shields, of Dakota, who is spending a short time in this district remarked that he was delighted at the appearance of the city and district. Mr. Shields has already invested to some extent in Southern Alberta lands and is going to invest some more.

"The Southern Alberta lands are the best thing anywhere," he remarked.
Mr. Shields went into Dakota when land was as cheap as it is in some places in Alberta now and at present he states that you can't touch it with less than fifty or sixty dollars an acre and land that will raise wheat like is being raised here is sure to reach even higher figures than that. In Dakota Mr. Shields remarked land was reckoned to be worth twice as many dollars as it will grow bushels of wheat per acre.—Lethbridge, Alberta, Daily Herald.

ALBANY.

Sarah Lizzie Becker.
We are saddened to learn of the death of one who went from this county to her parents to build up our great west.
In 1882 the subject of this sketch left Waterford with the rest of her father's family for Sparta, Wis. Her father, Deacon Isaac Becker, who was well known throughout this section and respected by all; and with whom he delivered a carefully considered and consistent, square dealing man. He had reared a family of six children, three sons and three daughters, which he had worked hard to educate and fit for life's work, so they might be lights in the world.

Sarah Lizzie Becker was born in Albany, Oct. 6th, 1853, on the farm now occupied by Charles R. Morey. When quite young, her father moved, I think to Sweden, and later, from there to Waterford.

Mr. Becker and his wife, Sarah Frye Becker, both passed away several years ago, although not until he had filled several public offices of trust, and had seen his children fitted for teachers etc., to continue the good work to which he had always been a helping hand.

To come back to our subject, Lizzie left her home in good health, to go to her brother's, John E. Becker's, who is a teacher at Fort Pierre, S. D. She was taken ill while on the train and on arrival at Fort Pierre a physician was called who pronounced it pneumonia, of which she died in the hospital, Sept. 16.

A few days later, suitable resolutions were offered and published by the Beaver Creek Reading Circle, of which she was the organizer, and a very active member.

WEST PARIS.

The community received a great shock when, Sunday evening, the report was circulated that Charles M. Swift had passed away. A man who was apparently in good health one minute and the next was lifeless, caused by heart failure.

Mr. Swift has spent the most of his life in the vicinity of West Paris with the exception of a few years in Pennsylvania.

He was an engineer by trade and for the past five years has run the engine for the West Paris branch of the Paris Mfg. Co. not missing one moment of time on duty.

He has made his home with Mrs. Laura Reed for a good many years. His room there was reserved for him even while he was at work elsewhere. For the last few years, on account of poor health, Mrs. Reed has been unable to board him so he has taken his meals at the hotel next door.

Last Sunday, Oct. 10, Mr. Swift was around all day as usual. After supper he went to the office then back into the hall and dropped dead.

When he received the news through a messenger in less than half an hour after he had seen and talked with him at the Grand Trunk railroad station.

Mr. Swift was the oldest of seven children who lived to grow up and son of Alvin and Caroline (Paine) Swift of Woodstock, and later of West Paris. His wife, Mrs. Laura Reed, was born at Fondulac, W. Me., Melville, an engineer on a railroad, in Chicago, Ill. Alice is the wife of E. M. Heath, who keeps a small store on Lisbon St., Lewiston, Dan's wife, Mrs. L. A. Smith, lives in South Paris, Wash. Lottie is the wife of C. H. Willis of Portland, who was for a number of years baggage master on the G. T. R. R., but now a collector in the Prudential Life Insurance Co., and Alvin D. of this place.

His mother died when Alvin was nine months old. The home was then broken up and three or four of the youngest children were separated and sent into good homes. His father, who is still living, has become feeble minded and about two years ago the children had him taken to the Insane Asylum at Augusta.

He was 54 years and a few months old and unmarried.

He was kind hearted and generous and fond of children. Among the mourners was a band of little boys and girls, who befriended and helped to have a good time. There are many other grown up children who have not forgotten his, grateful nature. That he gave to those who needed it, wherever he found them, more than ever will be known. Withal, he was frugal and it was found that he had accumulated a goodly sum of money.

He was fond of flowers and kept a garden in the ground near his engine room. Many a child received an early-spring bouquet.

He was always faithful in discharging his duty to his employers, even to the risk of his own life.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock at the Universalist church. Rev. Isabella S. Macduff made fitting remarks, the choir sang hymns. The last and rite was conducted by the order of F. and A. M. of which he was a member in good standing.

It was a very rainy day, nevertheless a large body of Masons, shopmates, little boys and friends were present.

The flowers were many and beautiful. A large upright piece with "Shopmates", a pillow with the Masonic emblem, a large basket with "Brother", a bouquet of pinks from his sister Alice, a bouquet of pinks from the little boys, a mound of sweet peas from the girls, dahlias and sweet peas from friends. A respected citizen and faithful friend has passed on.

The party was held in the Tuell home, and was a very successful one. Among the several pretty and useful gifts was a beautiful bouquet of roses from which each guest received one with the place card. Refreshments of ice cream and assorted cakes and crackers were served together with the customary birthday cake which was surrounded by 16 lighted candles, with the usual special significance.
